URBAN HEALTH PROJECT

2019 Annual Report

As the 32nd year of Urban Health Project comes to an end, we cannot begin to express our gratitude for the opportunity to serve this unique organization. Co-directors have the privilege of stewarding UHP's mission while strengthening our core values of service to the vulnerable and fostering community-minded student doctors. Through our interns' commitment and our service partners' tenacity we've seen the impact of UHP first hand. Witnessing the resilience of refugee children, the barriers facing people battling homelessness and addiction, and the compassion of those caring for the underserved have shown us both the power of UHP's mission and the importance of carrying it forward for the years ahead.

In 2018 UHP placed 26 interns with 20 community partners in Southwestern Ohio and Northern Kentucky, completing over 8000 hours of service. Interns served diverse neighborhoods and populations within our community including women and children experiencing homelessness, at-risk youth, men and women struggling with addiction, and more. They did so in a variety of settings, from community clinics and shelters to day-camps and treatment centers. Our interns designed creative programs to enhance the work of their community partners, launching health and nutrition-awareness classes, quality-improvement projects, and community health-fairs and workshops, and many others.

UHP continues to thrive in 2019. We have forged new connections in the community, strengthened old partnerships, and recruited a top-notch class of interns to continue UHP's legacy. In 2019 interns amplified their work through ongoing research, presentations at local and national conferences, and continued service to at-risk populations in the Cincinnati community. We pass the torch to next year's co-directors with confidence in our program and our mission. None of this work would be possible without the guidance of our advisory board and the generous support of our funders and alumni. Thank you for your commitment to community and the mission of UHP. We cannot wait to see how our program thrives in the years ahead.

Sincerely,

Christian Adams-Carey and Sarah N. Smith

Mission

To educate, inspire, and challenge medical students through their service to marginalized populations in Greater Cincinnati to produce more socially responsible physicians who have a greater understanding of the many factors that impact health.

Objectives

- To improve the health of the community by providing motivated and competent medical student interns to local organizations serving marginalized populations without any cost to the agencies.
- To dedicate 320 hours of service per intern annually to disadvantaged populations of Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky.
- To develop socially responsible physicians who are adequately prepared to face the challenge associated with providing quality care to underserved populations.

History

Urban Health Project was founded in 1986 when medical students at the University of Cincinnati decided they needed to supplement their rigorous medical studies with lessons in humanity. The program was intended to allow the students to begin interacting with diverse underserved patient populations during the summer after their first year of medical school. The hope was that these students would learn to see the patients they interacted with first and foremost as people rather than merely as diseases that needed treatment. In line with its founding ideals, Urban Health Project continues to teach students valuable lessons about working with the underserved and recognizing the complex social factors that impact their health. 32 years later, UHP interns have become a powerful force in improving healthcare for the underserved in Cincinnati.

"I think this experience opened my eyes to a lot of the barriers that people face that cause them to experience homelessness, apart from just losing housing. I think this will make me a better physician because I will have empathy for the needs of each patient, and I will try to refrain from jumping to conclusions about people's circumstances."

"In the short time I have been working with these kids, I have learned so much about compassion, leadership, organization, and caring, even more than I ever could have imagined... They teach me new things every day about how to be considerate and patient. I cannot imagine having spent my summer doing anything differently."
